

How Landlords Here Stand on Race Suicide

"Do Boston Landlords Encourage Race Suicide?" Bostoner Ames has had one interesting experience in trying to find a willing partner to let in Boston where children are admitted. She tells about it in tomorrow's issue of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

This issue is replete with unusually interesting and pertinent features, ranging from romantic themes to articles on most practical and utilitarian subjects.

That "this nonsense now and then" which appeals to the wisest is not omitted either, for in his comic section is found a familiar group of our funny friends in new and absurd predicaments.

"Miss Alice Roosevelt Engaged?" This BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will tell you about it. General Miles in Command.

An unusually entertaining article is also interested in our State militia and in the commanding officer of that body is found in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN under the subject "General Miles in Command of an Army on Massachusetts Soil."

New England Love Story. A New England love story, amazing in its delicacy of love, hate and revenge, will fascinate those whose literary fancy turns to vivid character pictures. Then there are three extraordinary romances, all dramatically told to round out the elements of human interest.

Three Subjects of Interest. "Are You Looking for a Good Wife?" In the Secret of Life. "The Yon Like Strange People." These are three other subjects which are treated in a clever manner in tomorrow's issue of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Bible Play by Clarendon. A feature of strong religious and dramatic interest combined in the story of clergymen who are to present a Bible play. This is a story worthy of attention from clergy and laity as well, however diverse their views may be on the subjects of dramatics or religion either.

Society Patronizes Prisoner. Can you imagine exclusive society women patronizing a prisoner in a penitentiary? Can you imagine a prisoner under sentence caring to be a client of fashionable dressers? Read about this in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Household Affairs. A critical article on fashions by one of the most noted exponents of the feminine sphere and an entertaining paper for the little ones are among the other features in tomorrow's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

This Time Cambridge Aldermen Avoid Complication With the Statutes.

THINK MAYOR WILL SIGN

The Cambridge Board of Aldermen has passed another bill relating to the investigation of the police force of that city, this time with modifications that avoid complications with the statutes.

The first bill was vetoed by Mayor Day, who held that under the law the aldermen have no right to order investigations of the police force.

The second bill, which was introduced by the Middlesex Grand Jury for alleged fraud in recent elections, was passed by the board.

The bill provides for the investigation of the police force, and for the removal of any officer who is found to be guilty of a crime.

The bill also provides for the removal of any officer who is found to be guilty of a crime.
